About Red Carpet Concierge Physician

Hello,

In August of 2009 I, unfortunately fell in a shopping mall and crushed my hip! I had surgery the next day and had all the necessary impliments included. Kind of like getting acrylic nails, only with a lot more extensive attention!

I spent a week in the hospital under the care of many doctors and nurses. I even had a special “throne” (no, not that kind) so I wouldn't have to sit to low to work to hard to stand to return to bed. That made me tired just telling you. My first time up I walked with my toes, wiggling them, grabbing the floor and sliding along. I was then transferred to a rehabilitation hospital where my outstanding care was repeated only just a little longer. One month!

I was very homesick and glad to be leaving at the end of the month, but, was someone going to bring me ice cream 24/7, or give me shots at 4:30 AM? Not the same kind of attention but I knew it was all necessary. And so, I pouted my concerns to my nurse and she said as she patted my hand “I will take care of you at your home”! And she did, this energenic young woman had just started her own home health care and made good her promise. Talk about timing. My sister has a masters in nursing and my other sister is a dula and so are my mentors, to encourage, supply information and give their input with physician interviews.

So, I want to share the best in my life with you as friend, patient and a concierge for 20 years to assist with your concerns in health and life.

How may I help you?

Your Concierge,
“Sandy”

As a patient you receive the utmost attention and care, almost as though you were a member of the family. Appointments can be made the same or next day with an unhurried physician that has time for you. Access of cell phone and email takes the guess out of physical and mental emergencies.

Your medical records have web access with a personal CD-ROM to carry with you for emergencies. And, a 24/7 WorldWide Medical Concierge is available for your peace of mind, whether at home or traveling.

Our staff even has connections with leading professionals should you need attention in specialized areas.
